There once was a bee hive hanging from an old oak tree in Avalon Park. And within this bee hive lived the queen bee, and as every queen has her kingdom, her kingdom comes with a royal army and her royal subjects. So among the queen's royal army there was a soldier that was very, very, curious, and his name was Buzz.

One day, Buzz was on duty collecting pollen to make some honey for the queen, when suddenly, a question popped into Buzz's head. "How can I get to Heaven?"

Well as you know they say when you depart this life and if you are a good creature on earth, God will let you get to heaven. But that was not good enough for Buzz. He thinks he can get to heaven without dying. This thought would not leave Buzz's mind, all day and all night.

So poor Buzz went to bed that night wondering how he was going to figure out a way to get to heaven. But the only thing Buzz figured out was how to fall asleep.

The next morning, Buzz woke up nice and early and with a lot of energy. He began to make his buzzing sound and then decided to set out and find heaven. So he flew out of the old oak's bee hive and set out to find heaven.

As he continued to buzz, he flew down to the ground to find an army of ants having breakfast on an ear of corn that was full of melted butter. He greeted the commander of the ant's army.

Buzz said, "Excuse me General Antsy Pants." The general replied by saying, "Good morning Sergeant Buzz. What brings you around to these low elevations?" Buzz said, "Well General, I was wondering if you knew the way to heaven?"

The General replied by saying, "Well sergeant, I really do not know, but I do believe it is higher than the ground we are standing on." Buzz said, "Ok. I guess I should look on higher grounds than on this ground." Buzz said goodbye to General Antsy Pants and continued to move along.
